

Question: Non-Markovian bath.

We have considered emission from an atom coupled to the electromagnetic field, seeing it behaves as a Markovian bath. How would the emission change if the electromagnetic field was non-Markovian, say by having a finite bandwidth (range of energies) rather than an infinite one? What are a few physical examples of non-Markovian baths?